

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Sorrow and Hope.

Here in the mute despair of tearless eyes
Lies the most pitiful of things—dead
grief,
Mourning in unvoiced groans, in un-
breathed sighs,
Death hoped, yet feared; life measured
long, the brief.

Such is the lot under the canopy
That arches over this circle of battered ghoul;
The ghosts of midnight leer where sun-
beams play—
Wee is the only season in our souls.

Here laughs humanity the final laugh,
Discovering at last that God is pain.
And reacheth out the bitter dregs to quaff—
For having drunk one needs not drink
again!

How little do we want who have it not,
How much we've coveted and now do
spurn.
Friends, it were well a little of our lot Ye shared—ye savorists that would be wise!

For earthly pleasure by herself betrayed,
Grieves like a woman weeping on her heart,
And souls raised on the slim foundation
laid.

How sink they when the propping
comes apart?
Yet even for us a chaster hope may dawn
Than the wild dreams of disappointed
youth!

The laugh of agony has come and gone,
Now smiles the splendid sorrow of the Truth.

M.

Byrne—Wendlinger.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Dominic's Church, Washington, on Saturday afternoon at 4:30 when Miss Celeste Wendlinger became the bride of Mr. Andrew J. Byrne. Both the young people are natives of Richmond. The bride, who is a daughter of Casper Wendlinger, was given in white, Paris mouseline, trimmed in tulle and wore a white hat. Rev. Father O'Rourke performed the ceremony. Mr. Byrne is a native of Richmond, but by the way this winter in Los Angeles, Cal., after visiting in Richmond.—News Leader.

THE WELL OF ST. KEYNE.

By ROBERT SOUTHEY.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

A WELL there is in the west country,
And a clearer one never was seen;
There is not a wife in the west country
But has heard of the well of St. Keyne.

An oak and an elm tree stand beside,
And behind doth an ash tree grow,
And a willow from the bank above
Droops to the water below.

A traveler came to the well of St. Keyne;
Joyfully he drew nigh,
For from cock-crow he had been traveling,
And there was not a cloud in the sky.

He drank of the water so cool and clear,
For thirsty and hot was he;
And he sat down upon the bank
Under the willow tree.

There came a man from the house hard by
At the well to fill his pail;
On the well-side he rested it,
And he bade the stranger hail.

"Now, art thou a bachelor, stranger?" quoth he;
"For an if thou hast a wife,
The happiest draught thou hast drank this day
That ever thou didst in thy life."

"Or has thy good woman, if one thou hast,
Ever been in Cornwall been?
For an if she have, I'll venture my life,
She has drank of the well of St. Keyne."

"I have left a good woman who never was here,"
The stranger he made reply;
"But that my draught should be the better for that,
I pray you answer me why."

"St. Keyne," quoth the Cornishman, "many a time
Drank of this crystal well;
And before the angel summoned her;
She laid on the water a spell."

"If the husband of this gifted well
Shall drink before his wife,
A happy man henceforth is he,
For he shall be master for life."

"But if the wife should drink of it first—God help the husband then!"
The stranger stooped to the well of St. Keyne,
And drank of the water again.

"You drank of the well, I warrant, betimes!"
He to the Cornishman said;
But the Cornishman smiled as the stranger spoke,
And sheepishly shook his head.

"I hasten'd as soon as the wedding was done,
And left my wife in the porch;
But faith she had been wiser than me,
For she took a bottle to church."

Ridge Church was the scene of a very pretty marriage last Wednesday night when Mr. James Henry Franklin led to the altar Miss Lottie Bell Thomas. The bride, who is the very pretty and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. B.
Thomas, was tastefully gowned in white organdy and carried a handsome bouquet of lilacs of the valley, while her long veil was caught with a cluster of the same flowers. Entering with her maid of honor, Miss Elsie Jones, the bride was met at the altar by the groom, who entered with his best man, Henry Ford. Other attendants were Miss Lillie Baughman, with Dr. L. P. Michael; Miss Mattie Eubank, with Mr. Alex. Jones.
